We are the ones in the classroom - Ask Us!!!

By promoting the use of constructive feedback and student involvement in teacher evaluation, Youth on Board is building a movement across the country to promote student voice, strengthen student-to-teacher relationships, improve teaching and learning, and create supportive, equitable, and student-centered school environments.

To transform the way schools and districts view the voices and expertise of young people and their ability to improve the classroom experience, and to support the movement for educational equity and social justice.

Youth on Board is providing assistance to students, teachers, youth organizers, and districts interested in taking on this project.

Technical assistance includes:
- Customized guidance from students, teachers, organizers, and administrators who have experience with student feedback
- Campaign development materials
- Sample survey tools
- On and off-site trainings

Constructive Feedback
students provide their teachers with feedback on classroom management, individual learning styles, subject instruction, school culture, and student engagement. It is anonymous and does not count towards a teacher’s evaluation.

Student Involvement in Teacher Evaluation (SITE) uses student feedback in the evaluation of teachers, providing a more comprehensive view than standardized test scores and classroom observations alone.

Visit studentvoicematters.org for more information on this project

Visit studentvoicematters.org for more information on this project